Ask friends and relatives for recommendations. Everyone has bought furniture at one time or another, so it's important that you check with people you know, who can give you a place to start. That way, you can hit the ground running and make your search go more efficiently, getting your furniture much quicker.

When you see something you like, wait to buy it for at least 24 hours. If it's not the last item in stock, you have the time. You need to go home and see if the piece you're considering would work in your space, and whether you really want to spend the money. Waiting will help.

Choose your furniture in function of your lifestyle. If you have children or pets, you should buy furniture that is stain resistant. Choose darker colors so stains or scratches are less noticeable. If you do not have pets or children, do not hesitate to purchase some lighter colors if this is the style you want.

Don't ever purchase any large piece of furniture without first measuring it. Knowing where you will show it means making sure it will fit there! Bring a tape measure when you shop for furniture and know in advance the spacial limitations you are working with. If you're ever in a pinch, phone home and have someone there give you the specs.

Check Craigslist for deals. There's often a lot of furniture that's given away for absolutely nothing, other than your expense to pick it up! That's a huge deal. Why do people give furniture away? They've decided to upgrade, and it can cost a lot of money to hire someone to get rid of the older piece. Take advantage of these situations.

If you need a new sofa, try finding one with some fully covered cushions. These cushions last longer and can be flipped regularly. Ideally, you should buy a sofa with removable covers so you can easily wash them. Removable covers can also be replaced very easily in case you cannot clean a stain.
